Excerpt: . . . 11 clients who were being treated by the VA for diabetes, who were Vietnam veterans, and the VA never told them, By the way, go file a claim for a service-connected disability. ERRIELLO Mr. P. In terms of the outreach that is going on right now, there is a certain amount of urgency in the sense that, in the Vietnam era, people were not treated early and cases became exacerbated because of the lack of care. Given the urgency with the folks coming home, what are the programs that are easiest for us to take to scale right away in terms of getting that outreach going right now Mr. R. I will just add that I think that one of the programs OWAN that we have seen that is starting to reach out is reaching out again into the private sector, particularly in the mental health community. The other thing is we need to talk about the whole picture, of the family of...
