I am an old man now, but I remember, I saw him in the flesh. My, my, what flesh! I can still see him shut his eyes to sing, - As he did always when he d drunk too much! He was the splndidest fool I ever knew. His great red nose was bent down like an ogre s, His mouth was wide, he was half-bald, half-grey, His legs were bandy. Every woman in town Had slapped his face, - although, to hear him talk, You d think he d kissed them all! He was a coward, We kicked him, spat upon him, whipped him, cursed him, And threw him out of doors. And yet, we liked him. What lies he told! He had a genius for it. He killed his wife, hopped upon Sheba s knee, Walked and talked with devils, raped and murdered. Why did we listen to him! Why did we like him! Well, I don t know. Say rather that we loved him - There was a something noble about the man. Somehow, though small, he cast an enormous shadow. The night before he died, we carried him home. He stopped to lean on the churchyard wall a moment, And stared at the tower clock. Listen! he said. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
