Blessed with every variety of soil, climate, and natural configuration, and, generally speaking, with a fairly liberal water supply, plants of all kinds, except perhaps those of the tropical and arctic regions, may be fairly grown within its boundary. It is to be regretted that, with the undoubtedly splendid opportunities which beneficent nature has showered on this colony with so lavish a hand, in the form of various kinds of soil and characters of climate, so little has been done in the way of taking practical advantage of those opportunities. From the finest broadcloth to the coarsest sacking, from the heaviest cable to the most delicate thread, from the strongest pasteboard to the thinnest paper, all were at our command and easy of acquisition; and therefore, probably, we have not troubled ourselves, as we might have done under other circumstances, about their production. In the earlier ages of the world, men had at first to find the wherewithal to satisfy the natural cravings of hunger, and, having done that, being neither protected with wool nor fur nor hair like the beasts, nor with feathers like the birds, to cast about for something to protect them from the inclemency of the weather.
