THE GIRL THAT WAS WISE (central American Folk-song) What would you do if I were poor, Tell me, what would you do? I d keep a tiny grocery store Where all the folk would buy Because my balance weights were true, My sugar-measure high. But that would take a lot of money, And what if we had none? In all the woods I d gather honey And sell it in the town With little twigs of cinnamon So sweet and thick and brown! Then come, and I will marry you For money none have I. I merely said what I would do, But I don t think I ll try, I do not think I ll try. TROPICAL RAIN The rain, in Nicaragua, it is a witch they say; She puts the world into her bag and blows the skies away; And so,...
